

It is not right to screen 0-3 year's babies for mental illness and the checklist that is stated is very subjective. Please do not label these babies and attach a stigma to these little souls. At this age their brain is still developing. Even if there is no problem this type of screening will sow a seed of doubt in everyone's mind and that poor child has to face and live with the stigma throughout his or her life, it won't be helping them but on hind side it will have repercussions. Please spare these babies and use the allocated funds for something where it will be more beneficial.
