

To the Productivity Commission on Mental Health 23/1/2020

RE Intervention and prevention. – Personal plea

Being a father of two and the grandfather of two I find this proposal horrific. I believe that the best I could do is to give them the best start in life that I can.

We all have minds of our own and no two minds are the same so to think that you can legislate or plan for action to be taken by an outside body is frivolous. To plan to put support in place and to make sure education is available to all is the best solution. Australia is now a multi-cultural country and to think that you can legislate or put a bureaucracy in place to care for the masses to me is pure communism as the people will no longer have a mind of their own and will then be drugged and or conditioned from the earliest possible age. This can only help those currently wanting to control the masses. Australia is the lucky country but we are unlucky if this commission is to put this draft recommendation in place to screen and interfere with our young.

The commission must be looked at with some concern as it is a leading Psychiatrist who is heading it and looking to put in Psychiatric based solutions that have no record of any success at all.

We all know that young children are subject to the vagaries of their own environment and their own capacity to cope but to suggest scanning is crazy. In itself it should be looked at as least anti-social and tampering with our future generations.

We have seen the results of drugging and ECT as mental health solutions and so whatever is planned should be looked at and a much more creative and individual approach taken if we are to benefit all our children. The future generation does not need some nebulous scanning. When you read thru this report you continually see and hear how the system is inadequate and we need more and more trained staff.

So if that is the case where are they going to come from and what data are they going to be trained on and at what cost.

We want a happy and prosperous future for our children not one of feeling fear or ridicule and or betrayal as they will not be able to trust their parents who have given up responsibility or themselves as they grow up as individuals who have all been screened diagnosed, stereo typed, drugged and if not behaved correctly turned into zombies with electro shock (ECT).

Please look at this submission for what it is a plea to sanity and let all the commissioners work towards a free and prosperous Australia for all.

Thank you

Andrew Wenborn
