

Productivity Commission Inquiry into the increased application of competition, contestability and informed user choice to human services

I work as a recovery coach in the mental health sector.

I am concerned that privatisation of this role would lead to significantly reduced care.

A key component of recovery services is to promote clients independence. The profit motive takes away from this - as dependent clients are a better source of income.