

Dear Prechebury Commission,

I am writing to express my concern about mental health screening of 0-3 year olds children in Australia.

I find it alarming that there is no tests to confirm that symptoms in 0-3 year olds are in fact disorders. Some of the suggested symptoms such as irregular feeding, whining, crying, temper tantrums, sleep and sleeping with the light on can't possibly be considered irregular traits unless there is intent to medicate all children between 0-3 years old.

Too often I have heard excuses of "more funding required" or "not enough funding" as reasons for ~~inactivity~~ or failures.

All the funding in the world will not solve anything if the solution doesn't work.

Please do not screen our children. Invest funding into medical research and programs which actually work.
