

Brief submission

As an Emergency doctor working in a busy public hospital I already encounter many patients who cannot afford to go to a GP. I fear that any form of privatisation of services, which will always result in an increased cost to the consumer, will be detrimental to our nations health. The public's health should remain the domain of the elected government, not some private company.

Robert Melvin