

The report needs to recognise that there can be conflicts between evidence-based animal welfare standards and some community expectations. Standards should be based on the real needs of animals, as determined by science, rather than anthropomorphic perceptions or preferences.

Tim Harding & Associates