

Submission to the Productivity Commission

Early Childhood policies should not be driven by employers and other external groups as they do not reflect the rights, interests and needs of children. High quality early childhood services are what matters for children. As such, the NQF should not be removed from preschools, and current standards should be maintained.

Meredith Wakeman